

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to the use of thiol proteases having Cathepsin L type activity in the formulation of vaccines for combating helminth parasites. Preferably the protease is derived from a fluke such as Fasciola hepatica.